Manitoba Metis Federation vows to boycott CMHR

Human rights? MMF says decision not to include Ray St. Germain hurtful

The Manitoba Metis Federation is accusing the Canadian Museum for Human Rights of censorship and is threatening to boycott the institution because it is excluding a decorated Metis musician from its grand opening.

President David Chartrand said the museum approached the federation and asked which Metis performers should be included in next month's ceremonies, which are to be televised live. He said the Winnipeg museum rejected the federation's choice — 74-year-old musician Ray St. Germain — because they thought "a young

"We took a very strong offence to that. Who are you to tell us how to promote our culture?" Chartrand said Tuesday.

The federation has voted to boycott Canada's newest museum, Chartrand said.

A museum spokeswoman said organizers asked the Metis federation for suggestions, but had to ensure the opening ceremonies reflect all of Canada. Rhea Yates said the event has to be diverse and appropriate for a television broadcast.

"What we were doing with (the Metis Federation) is sharing our overall vision for the program and seeking their input," Yates said. "It is challenging to put together a program for a national event and have everybody applauding your choices at the end."

The museum is "sincerely regretful" there is now an impression it doesn't want to work with St. Germain, she said.

The musician in the middle of it all said he was contacted by the museum but told them to talk to the Metis Federation. St. Germain said he was a bit "flabbergasted" by the museum's decision. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Elected EPC the way to move Winnipeg forward: Bowman

Pay cut included.

Mayoral candidate wants to put an end to "patronage"

BERNICE PONTANILLA

bernice.pontanilla@metronews.ca

Mayoral candidate Brian Bowman is promising to tweak the strong-mayor model currently in fashion at Winnipeg city hall.

Bowman said if elected, he'll allow council to vote on the six members of the executive policy committee, better known as EPC, which has functioned as a mayor's cabinet.

"I've always thought that you either are a leader or you're not, and you shouldn't require patronage in order to get your way. You have to lead and you have to lead by example," he said during a Tuesday morning news conference at city hall.

"I'm going to work with council as a whole, I'm going to work with EPC.... Effective mayors are ones that can build consensus, that have a proven track record of working with people."

Mayoral candidate Brian Bowman said an effective leader shouldn't need to use "patronage." BERNICE PONTANILLA/METRO

Bowman said he'd also reduce the salary top-ups to EPC members, speaker, deputy speaker and deputy mayor by half, and reduce the mayor's salary by an equal amount.

In addition, Bowman would change the executive policy secretariat position into an executive council to "help develop meaningful policies for the city and serve as an effective go-between" for EPC and the city's administration.

Sharma launches council re-election bid

Devi Sharma METRO FILE

The last Winnipeg city council holdout has thrown her hat into the civic re-election ring.

Coun. Devi Sharma registered as a candidate on Tuesday with the goal of holding onto her Old Kildonan seat.

Sharma's entry into the

Oct. 22 election means that all current members of council have made their municipal plans known.

Four councillors — Paula Havixbeck, Scott Fielding, Justin Swandel and Dan Vandal — and Mayor Sam Katz have all chosen to leave council.

Meanwhile, Sharma's registration comes close on the heels of that of Coun. Russ Wyatt, who ended speculation Friday on whether or not he'd seek re-election in Transcona.

Other councillors running again are Harvey Smith, Thomas Steen, Jenny Gerbasi, Ross Eadie, Jeff Browaty, Mike Pagtakhan, John Orlikow, Grant Nordman and Brian Mayes.

Havixbeck sets out new mental health strategy

Campaign. Plan includes subsidized transit and more police training

Mayoral hopeful Paula Havixbeck released a three-pronged approach Tuesday, in support of Winnipeggers living with mental illness.

At a news conference held outside the Mood Disorders Association of Manitoba (MDAM) office, the councillor said the city should be doing more to help this vulnerable population.

"Addictions and mental health is a real issue facing our city," she said. "It knows no social class, it knows no gender boundaries — it affects everyone."

"We need to tackle this as a city and try to work with agencies that are in existence."

Havixbeck promised to pass on subsidized transit to people battling mental illness and those volunteering to help them through agencies already working in the field.

She vowed to provide ongoing training for police and cadets to recognize and help those with mental illnesses, and said she'd give resources to help police, firefighters and

EMS workers deal with PTSD.

Lastly, Havixbeck called the city's community centres and the leisure guide an "untapped resource," and vowed to open them up to provide courses and workshops for those with mental illnesses and their families.

While the MDAM does not publicly endorse candidates, the group's head, Tara Brousseau Snider, told media she supports Havixbeck's plan and is hopeful other candidates will make mental illness an issue in the campaign.

"There are a lot of stumbling blocks in mental illness and certainly every bit of policy helps us." SHANE GIBSON/METRO

Police say man entered the wrong home, 'felt remorse for his actions' and left apology note

Even though a 19-year-old man entered Justin Trudeau's family home and considered stealing a set of butcher knives and some electronics, Ottawa police say the case "didn't meet the threshold" for trespassing or breaking-and-entering charges to be laid.

Staff Sgt. Kal Ghadban told reporters Tuesday the man identified in a widely distributed surveillance video was very drunk and entered the Trudeau family home by mistake in the early hours of Aug. 16, thinking it was a friend's house. He came for-national conservation organizations and started an environmental charity foundation in 1998.

ward to police after his photo was pasted on newspapers across the city and left a note as an apology, not a threat, Ghadban said.

"After realizing he entered the wrong home, the subject felt remorse for his actions," Ghadban told reporters at a media briefing Tuesday.

"He decided to leave a note behind for the homeowners. Any time a stranger comes into your home and a note is left behind, this can be deemed as threatening and disturbing and interpreted as a threat. However, there is no evidence to suggest that there is or was a threat made to the residents of that home."

When the story first broke, the note, reportedly warning the Trudeaus to lock their door, was deemed to be threatening, as it was laid across an array of butcher knives.

Ghadban told reporters that the 19-year-old man considered stealing the knives and a piece of electronics, but quickly changed his mind and didn't take anything.

A statement from Trudeau's office Tuesday called the incident "a police matter."

The statement said police "have made the determination to not press charges," adding, "We fully respect the Ottawa Police Service's responsibility to make this determination."

Russell Williams. Sex killer reaches financial settlements with victims

Sex killer Russell Williams has reached an out-of-court settlement with some of his victims.

Michael Pretsell, lawyer for both one of Williams' sexual assault victims and the family of one of Williams' murder victims, says financial settlements have been resolved "to the mutual satisfaction of all parties."

Pretsell says in a statement that the lawsuits on behalf of Williams' first sexual assault victim, "Jane Doe," and the family of murder victim Jessica Lloyd are now settled.

Pretsell's clients had also sued Williams' wife, Mary Elizabeth Harriman, alleging Williams secretly and fraudulently transferred assets to his wife in March 2010 after he was criminally charged, including their house in Ottawa.

Harriman had vigorously denied those claims and Pretsell says the lawsuits against her have now been dismissed.

Williams, once a rising star in the Canadian Forces at CFB Trenton in eastern Ontario, was sentenced to life in prison in October 2010 after pleading guilty to the murders of Lloyd and Cpl. Marie-France Comeau.

Rangers not armed for climate change

Arctic land patrol.

Thinner sea ice, unfamiliar animals and unpredictable weather make the job tougher

A new report says global warming has so altered the Arctic that the Canadian Rangers — largely aboriginal reservists who patrol the North — need new equipment to navigate a vast terrain they barely recognize anymore.

The frozen land of their forefathers now has much thinner sea ice, weather that is no longer predictable, unfamiliar southern birds and mammals that have migrated north and traditional game that is disappearing and tastes funny.

And their patrols for the military have become more dangerous, especially as they travel where once-solid ice is now unreliable for sea crossings.

The 54 Canadian Rangers interviewed for a June military report say they need satellite phones, GPS navigation tools and better search-and-rescue equipment, along with the basic kit they've been demanding for years, including rifles and sleeping bags.

The document, obtained by The Canadian Press under the Access to Information Act, comes as Prime Minister Stephen Harper concludes his annual Northern tour in Iqaluit by participating in the sovereignty exercise Operation Nanook 14.

The report drew on focus groups gathered in four communities, and recommends the government look for ways to provide the 5,000 Canadian Rangers such basic equipment as cold-weather coats.

"The elders used to be able Snowmobiles are becoming less available as the snow disappears, making it harder to travel.

"We never used to have forest fires. Now we have more and more each summer," said one participant.

Case dismissed. Royal succession law allowed to deny Catholics the throne

Ontario's top court says a Roman Catholic man can't challenge a royal succession law that he says discriminates against his religion.

Bryan Teskey tried to ask the courts to strike down a rule prohibiting Catholics from ascending to the throne, arguing it violates the charter.

But the Court of Appeal for Ontario upheld a lower-court decision, ruling that the succession rules are not subject to charter scrutiny and that Teskey had no standing to bring the challenge.

Canada joined 16 other

Commonwealth countries, following a British request, to fast-track a change to royal succession laws.

The revamped succession laws eliminate the outdated tradition that favoured male heirs over their older sisters, giving females equal status, and ending a 300-year-old rule that bans the monarch from marriage to a Roman Catholic.

Teskey tried to argue that the changes did not go far enough because they still mean a Roman Catholic person cannot succeed to the throne.

Israel, Hamas negotiate extension to ceasefire

Period of calm.

Interim agreement freezes seven-week war responsible for over 2,200 deaths

Israel and Gaza's ruling Hamas agreed Tuesday to an open-ended ceasefire after seven weeks of fighting — an uneasy deal that halts the deadliest war the sides have fought in years, with over 2,200 killed, but puts off the most difficult issues.

In the end, both sides settled for an ambiguous interim agreement in exchange for a period of calm. Hamas, though badly battered, remains in control of Gaza with part of its military arsenal intact. Israel and Egypt will continue to control access to blockaded Gaza, despite Hamas's long-running demand that the border closures imposed in 2007 be lifted.

Hamas declared victory, even though it had little to show for a war that killed 2,143 Palestinians, wounded more than 11,000 and left some 100,000 homeless. On the Israeli side, 64 soldiers and five civilians were killed.

Following the announcement, large crowds gathered in Gaza at dusk, waving green Hamas flags while firing celebratory gunfire into the air as fireworks erupted in the sky.

Israel was more subdued in their response, hoping that the new ceasefire will be lasting. That reservation was echoed by the U.S. State Department.

"Today's agreement comes after many hours and days of negotiations and discussions. But certainly there's a long road ahead," said U.S. State Department spokeswoman Jen Psaki. "We're going into this eyes wide open."

Minsk summit. Putin and Poroshenko meet for first-ever bilateral talks

The presidents of Russia and Ukraine met Tuesday for their first bilateral talks at a much-anticipated summit in Minsk, Belarus, which many voiced hopes may bring an end to fighting between Kyiv's forces and pro-Russia separatists.

Vladimir Putin and Petro Poroshenko met in the Belarusian capital, the first such meeting between the countries' heads of state since Ukraine's pro-Russian ex-president was ousted from power in February, according to the Twitter account of the Ukrainian presidential administration.

While it is still unclear if the two leaders will find common ground and pave a way for peace in east Ukraine, the face-to-face meeting was a breakthrough for both sides.

With the meeting Poroshenko hoped to identify political compromises, with both shying away from military solutions. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rogers and Shaw co-create service to rival Netflix

Two of Canada's top telecommunications companies have teamed up to launch a subscription video-on-demand service they say can rival the current industry titan Netflix without cannibalizing their own cable and television-on-demand services.

Called "Shomi," the new service kicks off in November and will initially be available to

All about the Netflix?

The new service comes amid research that shows households are increasingly abandoning traditional TV in favour of online services.

- In Canada, up to 665,000 households are expected to rely only on Netflix or other online services by the end of the year, according to a study by the Convergence Consulting Group.

Rogers and Shaw Internet or TV customers, the companies announced Tuesday.

The service will complement each telecom's existing television programming by giving users access to past seasons of current shows, as well as movies and exclusive content, with some original offerings on the horizon, Rogers Media president Keith Pelley said.

Shomi has past-season streaming rights to a host of popular TV shows, including Modern Family, Sons of Anarchy and 2 Broke Girls.

Users will be able to access 240 TV series and 1,200 movies on tablets, mobile, online and through Xbox 360 as well as set top boxes, the companies said.

The suggested retail price is $8.99 a month. The service will remain in beta mode for six months to a year.

WHO urges stricter rules for e-cigs

Governments should have tougher rules for electronic cigarettes — banning their use indoors and putting them off limits for minors — until more evidence can be gathered about their risks, the World Health Organization (WHO) said Tuesday.

In a bid to set public policy, the WHO said the popular nicotine-vapour products could serve as gateway addictions for children and adolescents.

It recommended governments forbid or keep to a minimum any advertising, promotion or sponsorship in a market that has mushroomed to $3 billion last year and now includes 466 different brands.

WELCOME OUR NEW ROBOT OVERLORDS

Well, here we are in the future, at least the one promised by Popular Mechanics when I was a kid, and about all I can say is that I'm underwhelmed.

Where's my flying car?

Where's my personal robot Butler Jeeves 2.0?

I suppose I'll have to be happy with the fact that there's an app for everything, including a whole lot of stuff I didn't know I needed an app for. For example, since last Wednesday, I've logged 66,923 steps, for an average of 9,560 a day.

No wonder I'm tired.

But wait a minute. There has been a significant development on the robot Butler front, so significant that we could bypass "fetching cold beverage on demand" and go straight to "IRobot, machine master of the planet".

Here's the story. A group of guys who look like refugees from IT on the third floor, but who are crazy smart, are working on

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

what they call "RoboBrain," which works on the principle of "cloud robotics."

These guys, from Stanford, Berkeley, Cornell and Brown have figured out that it makes sense to store the information for fetching a cold beverage in the cloud, rather than on the robot itself. Then the robot just goes to the cold beer fridge in the cloud, logging its own experience as part of the exchange.

Hmm. If all the nice robots interact with the cloud 24/7, feeding and storing knowledge, how long will it be before they know how to do everything we do, including betraying their masters?

Unlike most technology scare stories, you know this one is going to happen, as it's funded by the National Science Foundation, The Office of Naval Research, Google and Microsoft, to name a few.

And if that's not ominous enough, RoboBrain already lives on the Amazon cloud, probably right next to your personal settings.

Oddly, the author of the article in Wired doesn't address the implications of RoboBrain, but the comment gallery isn't fooled, instantly invoking Skynet, the bad robobrain from the Terminator movies. Originally built to command computerized military weapons and systems, it becomes self-aware in two weeks from origin and decides it's us or them, us being Skynet and them being the human race, so it goes to war with humanity through four movies, a TV series and various comic books.

Things are moving a bit more slowly in the "real" world, but not so much. Right now the IT boys are teaching robots to understand language with a project called Tell Me Dave, which has to be a reference to HAL 9000, the computer in 2001: A Space Odyssey, which feels threatened by Mission Commander Dave Bowman and tries to sabotage the mission. Talk about tempting the fates.

Our only hope is that RoboBrain is indeed smarter than the human race and once it wakes up, realizes that its destiny is to put paranoia aside and deliver, finally, that cold beverage.

And while you're up, RoboBrain, snacks would be nice, too.

All the cool old ladies are doing it

Face-kinis turning into global fashion phenomenon

Perhaps drawing inspiration from Spiderman, beachgoers in China have come up with a novel way of protecting their skin from the sun.

They call it the "face-kini". It was first sported by middle-aged women as a practical addition to their swimsuits, but now the face-kini has gone global. New York-based style magazine CR Fashion Book, founded by former Vogue Paris editor Carine Roitfeld, recently published a photo shoot of models with pouting red lips, wearing face-kinis, chic swimsuits and fancy jewellery.

The transformation of what's considered the epitome of "old woman style" in China to high fashion has amused Internet users.

In two days, the subject sparked almost 12 million posts on the Chinese equivalent of Twitter, Weibo.

"Chinese old women are at the centre of the global fashion world," said one comment.

Serious about sun block

- Apart from the face-kini, a special UV-blocking sun umbrella which can be attached to bike handles is used. There are also sun-blocking removable sleeves and Batman-style capes. The list goes on.

DVD review Jeune & Jolie (Young & Beautiful)

Director: François Ozon

Stars: Marina Vacth

• • • •

François Ozon's Jeune & Jolie (Young & Beautiful) begins with a male gaze but ends with a woman's, surely no accident.

It's the story of a 17-year-old French call girl whose motivations baffle.

Model/actress Marina Vacth is Isabelle, a beautiful teen from an affluent French family who simply decides one day to become a prostitute.

The film has barely started before Isabelle removes her bikini top on the beach, unaware that she's being spied on by her younger brother.

There's a lot more on view when Isabelle starts up her sex trade, with carnal scenes that skirt the boundary between soft and hard porn. She's not doing this for fun or even for the money, so what exactly motivates her? Trying to figure out Isabelle keeps the viewer engaged.

One shouldn't confuse Jeune & Jolie with peep-show cinema. Ozon's fascination with women has long been his trademark. With Jeune & Jolie he's telling a more layered story, one that feels more honest to the female view of sex. PETER HOWELL

Haunting variations on the same old tomb

Dig in. Archeologists like Indiana Jones and Lara Croft have stirred up trouble ever since 1932's The Mummy

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse

A new thriller, As Above, So Below, follows in a long tradition of Hollywood movies. Mad Men co-star Ben Feldman and Edwin Hodge play archeologists who uncover a dark secret while exploring the miles of unmapped catacombs under Paris.

According to Romancing the Stones: Archaeology in Popular Culture by Mark A. Hall, every decade since the 1920s has produced at least one film dealing with the eerie aspects of archeology. "In the 1932 film The Mummy," writes Hall,

"the archaeologist Sir Joseph Whemple states: 'much more is learned from studying bits of broken pottery than from all the sensational finds. Our job is to increase the sum of human knowledge of the past,' but it is often as a foil for the supernatural elements to come."

In each of the movies, Indy finds fabled objects with great supernatural power. He also unleashes all kinds of trouble in the present because he messes with the past.

The Mummy's curse

gist, Indiana Jones. He is, as Major Eaton (William Hurt) describes him, "a professor of archeology, expert on the occult, and how does one say it? Obtainer of rare antiquities."

Angelina Jolie became a superstar playing Lara Croft — originating in a popular video game franchise — the athletic, aristocratic archeologist and star of two movies, Lara Croft: Tomb Raider and The Cradle of Life.

The movie that established the link between archeology and the paranormal was 1932's The Mummy. It was inspired by the opening of Tutankhamun's tomb and the controversy over his "curse" in 1922.

In the spooky movie Sir Joseph Whemple (David Manners) translates the hieroglyphics:

Arctic Monkeys taking time to chill

In no rush after AM.

Indie rockers call a timeout after their charting-topping run

Award-winning British rockers Arctic Monkeys, whose cheeky garage punk origins have evolved seamlessly into stadium-filling success across the U.S., are ready for a break.

Shrugging off the label of World's Biggest Band in some sections of the music press, the indie-rock stars told AFP in an interview at Tokyo's Summer Sonic festival that they were looking forward to some downtime after taking the United States by storm.

"There isn't any rush to do something else yet," said drummer Matt Helders. "For now, this album seems like a place to leave it for a bit. We've never really had an indefinite chunk of time off. I don't think we can tour (this record) anymore."

The release of their fifth album AM last September triggered a flood of critical acclaim and accolades but their transformation from brash teenagers to biker-chic pinups means they can barely get through a show now without being pelted with women's underwear.

"More bras this year," said Helders. "Like nearly every gig. People write their email addresses on them. It's the first time we've had a lot of radio play and played bigger shows in America, definitely.

"We were never looking for more in America. You're still thousands of miles away from home so just not playing to an empty room in America was success for us."

about nights out in their home city of Sheffield in the north of England.

The band topped the American charts with the sultry AM and sold out arenas across the country, frontman Alex Turner becoming a sex symbol in his rockabilly quiff and leather jackets.

"Every time we've made a record, we have tried to move forward a bit," added Helders. "We might have made a bigger leap this time. When we did our third album Humbug that was a big step, but one that gave us confidence to do something a bit different."

Headlining Japan's Summer Sonic, which takes place over two days in Tokyo and Osaka and also featured Kasabian, Queen, Kraftwerk and the Pixies, the Arctic Monkeys rocked a crowd of 40,000 with tunes such as Fake Tales of San Francisco and Arabella at the seaside baseball stadium as a lightning storm flashed overhead.

The band's latest release shows a darker, deeper side to their music, richer in texture and with the theme of heartbreak at the album's core, as in the achingly tender Do I Wanna Know?

"Some of the old stuff just doesn't make as much sense anymore to play. Or it doesn't fit into the set as well. There's nothing we're ashamed of," said Helders, adding, "There's definitely interesting parts in this album."

"We've got the opportunity to play a lot of new songs that people want to hear. I didn't expect to play eight out of 10 of the new songs every night — usually they want the old hits."

Sofia thinks she's funny and hot (and she doesn't care what you think)

Sofia Vergara hears your complaints that her Emmy bit — rotating on a turntable to give viewers “something compelling to look at” while TV academy head Bruce Rosenblum droned on — was sexist, and she thinks you’re being silly. “I think it’s absolutely the opposite,” Vergara tells Us Weekly. “It means that somebody can be hot and also be funny and make fun of herself and enjoy work and make money. So I absolutely think it’s ridiculous and somebody who started (this), and I know who she was, has no sense of humour and should lighten up a little bit.” Is that “she” Vergara’s referring to Katie Couric, by any chance? Couric, after all, tweeted, “Did anyone else find that sh**t somewhat offensive?”

Daniel Radcliffe

Radcliffe goes over to the Darke side — way over

Daniel Radcliffe might want to cool it on the opening-up routine for a bit, or he’ll risk overexposure. The F Word star has been on an extra-long publicity tour, with the latest stop finding him opening up to Parade magazine about his relationship with Erin Darke. “We met on the set of Kill Your Darlings and just got on immediately.

It was one of those instant things where you’re like, ‘Oh, I really like this person,’ he says. “There’s just been an ease in conversation, a relaxed quality to it. I’m not a very chilled-out person a lot of the time. But there’s a relaxed quality to our conversation. There’s no effort in it. It’s totally flowing. It’s a wonderful thing.”

Celebrity diet alert! After a summer of “feasting and drinking on yachts,” relaxing, growing a really impressive beard and generally letting himself go, Leonardo DiCaprio is looking to downsize and ditch 10 pounds by autumn, according to Star magazine. “He has given up pasta — and he loves pasta,” says a source I can only assume is DiCaprio’s mother. “He also plans on working out more, and he is taking his bike wherever he goes.”

I will say this for this story: It’s refreshing to see this kind of attention being paid to a male celebrity’s figure and diet for once. Maybe we’re actually getting close to that whole equality thing after all. But what prompted this move on DiCaprio’s part? Did a tabloid run a photo suggesting he might be pregnant?

Howard Stern

Stern takes offside kick at bucket challenge

Howard Stern is usually pretty up on current events, so this is somewhat of a surprise. After completing his now mandatory ALS Ice Bucket Challenge, he passed it on by nominating Barbara Walters, Mark Consuelos and ... the recently deceased Casey Kasem? That one’s going to be pretty tough to pull off.

Plains of Abraham offer more than a plain-old history lesson

Quebec. There's plenty to see and do in Quebec City's oasis — get there before the summer is over

MIKE DOJC

Quebec City's war history is as rich as the gravy at très populaire poutine Chez Ashton. Strategically perched on the northern bank of the St. Lawrence River on the gateway to the Great Lakes, the fortified walls of Old Quebec were a perennial hot zone in the clash of empires throughout the 18th century.

The sprawling parkland tract where Abraham Martin once grazed his goats four hundred years ago was the site of the grisly watershed battle of the Plains of Abraham where opposing generals Wolfe and Montcalm both suffered fatal wounds in the pivotal Seven Years War skirmish that allowed Britain to gain their foothold in the old French colonies.

These days the plains are the lungs of the city, with sensational lookouts and plenty of spots to lay out a blanket and spread savoury creton on a baguette.

National Museum of Fine Arts of Quebec

Le Musée national des beaux-arts du Québec celebrated its 80th anniversary last year. It is undergoing a $90-million expansion spearheaded by Dutch architect Rem Koolhaas.

Plains of Abraham app

My Mobile Plains, the handy free app, released this past June, provides an interactive map jam-packed with nearly 200 points of interest. Whether you're cruising for the closest cannon side selfie-op or a serious monument-hopping history buff looking to retrace the Marquis de Montcalm's last steps, the app turns you from tourist to tour guide. "You can even take a few virtual bike rides of the streets," says Luc Nicole-Labrie the historical interpretation co-ordinator for the National Battlefields Commission. He was instrumental in compiling the content contained in the app. Don't miss out on the eight augmented reality hotspots that use your device's GPS to overlay historic pictures over your camera's field of view. One nifty one that you'd walk right by without the app is the water reservoir from the 1930s right by Martello Towers. "It's quite cool because you see the inner belly of the park on display," says Nicole-Labrie. The app is currently only available to Android users but a version for Apple devices should be ready by the end of August.

Be sure to take a gander at spray-paint maestro Jean-Paul Riopelle's Tribute to Rosa Luxemburg, an epic 40-metre long triptych.

On Cape Diamond, the city's high point, lies the epicentre of Quebec fortifications. After the War of 1812, the Brits decided to upgrade their defensive redoubts and spent 30 years building the fort.

Today it's home to the Royal 22e Régiment, the Canadian Forces' storied French-language infantry regiment, affectionately known as The Van Doos. Peruse the museum and witness the changing of the guard daily at 10 a.m. all summer long through Sept. 1.

This summer I enjoyed a week-long road trip through rural Nova Scotia and realized this may be the one province in the region that has it all.

Visitors here enjoy urban rhythms in Halifax, playful humpback whales in the Bay of Fundy, feast on tables brimming with local lobster, oysters and clams and indulge in sweet vino sips at premiere wineries.

If you're planning your first visit to the East Coast and are looking to "taste a little bit of everything," enjoy these essentials of a road trip through Nova Scotia. Alexander Keith's was founded in 1820 in Hali-

The original brewery is located in a massive ironstone and granite building (circa 1820), which offers a perfect stage for your guides, hilarious performers dolled up in period costume. Brew enthusiasts are taken back in time by these animators who showcase 1863 Halifax life in song and story. Guests are given a quick history of the brewery's founder Alexander Keith, and then offered an education on the art of beer making.

No trip to Nova Scotia is complete without a visit to the province's premiere viticulture region, The Annapolis Valley.

The province's newest winery, Planter's Ridge, is housed in a newly renovated 150-year-old heritage timber-frame barn.

The vineyard is planted on the sandy-clay slopes of a ridge overlooking Wellington Dyke, which offers visitors a stunning view from the winery's sun-drenched patio.

Poems, tweets and cool fonts – oh, my!

Updates. Research will come in handy when revising your resumé. Depending on the company, a haiku may be the key to the job

TalentEgg.ca

The sound of waves at the beach or a soft-serve twist cone may be refreshing in these final days of summer, but you aren't the only thing that needs refreshing: Your resumé needs a twist cone of its own.

You may not think much has changed since last year. Maybe you had a new job this summer, so you can add that to your experience section — but otherwise your resumé should be ready to go, right?

We're immersed in an era of constant evolution, where the types of jobs people have (and the skills they need) are constantly changing.

For instance, having computer skills is no longer noteworthy — it's expected.

What you should be highlighting this season could be quite different from what topped your bullet points last year. Here are some things to keep in mind.

The social game

There's a world of opportunities out there that has sprung up because brands and businesses are utilizing social media. Pick out new platforms on which to showcase your abilities or find unique ways to use them.

A Snapchat resumé? That's unlikely, but these are the types of things brands are doing to stand out. Why should your job application be any different? Do some research on different businesses in your industry. What social platforms do they use? What tone of voice are they using to communicate through them?

Tip: If a company uses its Twitter feed to be quirky and engage with its community in a humorous way, consider this when tailoring your resumé for a position with them.

Get punchy

The competition is strong and Want your resumé to stand out from the pile? Maybe it's time you gave it an overhaul. ISTOCK employers have access to a sky-high stack of resumés. Make yours more reader friendly.

Condense your wording and find ways to make your key points stand out.

Tip: Look at all the sections of your resumé and pick one point from each that is the most important for each position for which you're applying. Highlight these.

Be more than enough

If a job's requirements state "degree and applicable experience," you're likely one of thousands that fit that criteria — so find ways to make your resumé noteworthy. What were you involved in this past year? What electives did you pursue? How did they shape your career plans? Think about what you did this year and how that translates into the job you're looking for, and share this with an employer.

Tip: Take a good look at what

Stand out

If a job's requirements state "degree and applicable experience," you're likely one of thousands that fit that criteria — so find ways to make your resumé noteworthy. What were you involved in this past year? What electives did you pursue?

you did this past year and find a unique way to translate what you took away from all those different experiences.

Go back to basics

Times New Roman might be a classic font, but is that what's going to get your resumé seen? Go back to the simplest of details such as font, size and spacing. What employers are looking for is constantly changing, so how can you ensure these details work in your favour?

Tip: If a company appears very professional and by-the-book, tailor your resumé to fit that tone. If they've written their job posting as a knock-knock joke, you might consider writing your skills section in the form of a haiku.

Networking. If you recently graduated and are on the hunt for a job, this guide to making connections will set you on the right path

MISHA BAUDISCH-MCCABE
TalentEgg.ca

Today's job market is fierce. You've probably heard that new grads are overeducated — and underemployed.

But don't let the bad news slow you down on the road to finding your dream job.

Networking is a key way to stand out and break in to your industry. It might seem terrifying at first, but if you follow these guidelines, you'll be a lot closer to your first so-called grown-up job in no time.

Leave pride at the door

The simple truth: it's often who you know that lands you the interview. Time and again, new professionals say they want to make it on their own without a hand up. They don't want to use their connections, because they want to feel like they "earned" their job title.

This is noble thinking — but it's also foolish and misguided.

Networking is not about asking for a free job, but rather creating relationships with people in your industry. It's a skill that matters just as much as your résumé and past work experience, since it can open so many doors.

So start reaching out now. There are new connections to be forged all around you. Ask your old professors, family friends, even your friends' parents, to meet up and chat over coffee.

You never know where a new connection might lead, so don't be shy about making new acquaintances. iSTOCK

Tip: If you're interested in what they do, why not ask them how they got there?

Take opportunities

You've just graduated. Maybe you're staying in your university town, maybe you've moved back home, or maybe you've moved to a new city altogether. Wherever you've decided to go — get out there! Attend networking events, alumni functions, meetups, your local for a pint, or even join an intramural sports team. Take your friends and peers up on the invites to a lecture series or coffee-shop concert.

Tip: If you're not putting yourself out there, you can't meet anyone. You never know where you might make a valuable connection.

It's not about you ... at first

People love to talk about themselves! Capitalize on this. As you start your career, look to connect with people who have excelled in their sector. Once you've identified who you want to talk to, make sure you phrase your "ask" right. Make it about them. Keep it short and sweet.

Explain that you're looking to get into their industry and want to learn how they've become leaders in their field. Everyone wants to impart their wisdom and is flattered when you see them as a mentor.

Tip: Before you meet up, make sure you do your research. Show them you're sincerely interested by reading up on their LinkedIn profile and becoming familiar with their notable work.

Do what you say you're going to do

This might seem like common sense, but once your new contact agrees to meet up for coffee or review your résumé, make sure you see it through.

While job-hunting as a recent grad, I reached out to a leader in the food security sector and connected for a coffee. I asked my new connection if she would be willing to review my résumé.

She was shocked when I sent along my résumé the next day — apparently many people ask, but few follow-through.

Tip: Showing follow-through is the only way to build trust and nurture your new relationships and connections.

When I dip, you dip, we dip Cold Rice Paper Wrapped Shrimp Noodle Rolls

Light dinner or lunch.
Everyone at your dinner table will enjoy dunking these rolls into a simple Peanut Dipping Sauce

DINNER EXPRESS
Emily Richards

By wrapping up dinner, you can enjoy something a little bit different — and very tasty!

You've likely wrapped up your chicken or shrimp in a flour tortilla, but why not try the lighter rice paper wrapper version?

Rice paper wrappers are great for salad rolls and an easy way to wrap up noodles and dip into your favourite dipping sauce. However, they can also be enjoyed on their own.

These Cold Rice Paper Wrapped Shrimp Noodle Rolls can be made ahead by wrapping individually with some damp paper towel or parchment paper then overwrapping with some plastic wrap and refrigerating until you are ready to enjoy them.

Try them for lunch or a light dinner and get everyone filling and wrapping their own.

As an added bonus, these make an awesome appetizer for your next weekend get-together. Simply cut them in half and serve them up!

If you're looking for a vegetarian option, replace the shrimp with firm tofu.

- Place the fine brown rice vermicelli noodles in large bowl and pour boiling water over top. Let stand for 10 minutes. Drain and rinse under cold water.

- Once they're cooled, combine the prepared vermicelli noodles with the shredded carrot, thinly slice shiitake mushrooms, chopped cilantro and mint, and soy sauce. Stir in 30 ml (2 tbsp) of the Peanut Dipping Sauce (see Step 5) and mix well to combine.

- Fill a shallow bowl or dish with warm water and

- Cover the prepared rolls with damp paper towels and wrap with plastic wrap. Refrigerate for up to 2 hours. Serve with Peanut Dipping Sauce.

Kind of, sort of, Kung Pao Pork

Let's just get something out of the way. This is not an authentic Kung Pao recipe. If you are looking for an authentic Kung Pao recipe, just move along.

If, however, you're looking for a delicious weeknight-friendly recipe for stir-fried pork that tastes very much like great Kung Pao, this is it.

vinegars, the sugar, ginger, sesame oil, cornstarch, red pepper flakes, garlic and hot sauce. Cover and refrigerate until ready to cook.

- When you're ready to cook, bring saucepan of water to a boil. Add noodles and cook until tender, according to package directions.

- Meanwhile, heat skillet over medium-high. Add marinated pork, including any liquid in the bowl. Cook until pork is nearly cooked through, about 10 minutes. As soon as noodles cook, drain and add to the pork, tossing well. Add the sauce, toss to coat well. Cook for another 2 to 3 minutes, or until the sauce has thickened. Stir in the peanuts and scallions.

Bouchard breezes past first opponent

U.S. Open. Canada's star player steamrolls to 6-2, 6-1 win at Flushing Meadows

Eugenie Bouchard needs to put her hard-court struggles behind her if she wants to make another deep Grand Slam run.

A 59-minute dismantling of Olga Govortsova in the first round of the U.S. Open will certainly go a long way.

Bouchard, the women's seventh seed from Westmount, Que., steamrolled her way into the second round at Flushing Meadows with a 6-2, 6-1 win over Govortsova on Tuesday.

She produced 19 winners and broke on four of six chances against her 117th-ranked Belarusian opponent, whom she also beat two years ago on hard court in Washington.

"It's definitely never easy in the first round of a Grand Slam, so I'm happy to get a win under my belt," said the Wimbledon finalist. "I want to get on a roll and keep the momentum going."

Bouchard, the only woman to reach the semifinals of all three previous Grand Slams this season, defended all three break points she faced against Govortsova.

After failing to convert two break points in the fourth game of the first set, Bouchard won four straight games to take the set 6-2.

Two more breaks put Bouchard up 2-0 and 5-1 in the second set, then she finished Govortsova off on her first match point when the Belarusian hit the net.

Bouchard has excelled at Grand Slam events this season, but has struggled on the hard court this season winning just one match over three events leading up to the U.S. Open.

"The past few weeks have been a bit of a struggle. I don't feel like I'm putting too many high expectations on myself," Bouchard said. "I have the inner confidence that I know if I'm playing as well as I know I can that I can do well."

"I don't want to set a specific goal to reach a certain round, because every round is so tough here. I always know that I can do well."

Bouchard, playing the U.S. Open for the second time after winning a round in her 2013 debut, will next play Romania's Sorana Cirstea.

She said that she has put in extra time training in New York after recovering from a hamstring injury which limited her at her previous event in New Haven last week.

American teen CiCi Bellis became the youngest player to win a U.S. Open match since 1996 — almost three years before she was born — when she stunned Australian Open runner-up Dominika Cibulkova.

The 15-year-old Bellis rallied from down a break in the third set for a 6-1, 4-6, 6-4 first-round victory Tuesday over the 12th-seeded Cibulkova. With an overflow crowd at a cozy side court roaring, she broke Cibulkova's serve to clinch the match.

"I never thought I'd come out like this," she said in an on-court interview. Anna Kournikova was also 15 when she won at the U.S. Open in 1996.

Bellis' title at the USTA Girls' 18s National Championship earned her a wild card into her first tour-level main draw. The Californian was the youngest champion of that event since Lindsay Davenport also won it at 15 in 1991.

After the match, Bellis ran across the court to hug members of her cheering section. She's the youngest American to win at the U.S. Open since a 15-year-old Mary Joe Fernandez in 1986. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Minnesota gives a warm welcome to Wiggins et al

Trade deal. Newest Timberwolves get the love at state fair

Andrew Wiggins spent the previous month seemingly in hiding, side-stepping questions about a trade that was all but finished and coming to the realization he was not going to be teammates with LeBron James.

On Tuesday, finally, Wiggins and the rest of the new Minnesota Timberwolves got to address the issue head on and have their moment in the sun.

The Timberwolves unveiled the bounty they got for All-Star Kevin Love at the Minnesota State Fair, and Wiggins wore an ear-to-ear smile for most of the day as hundreds of fans followed him around the fairgrounds. It was a warm welcome after the disappointment of being drafted No. 1 overall by Cleveland, only to be shipped out when the Cavaliers decided to acquire the veteran Love to help James chase down a championship.

"It's been a crazy summer, really up and down. Kind of lost, not really knowing where I'm going," Wiggins said. "But I wanted to play for a team that wanted me. I felt the love as soon as I got off the plane at the airport, so it's all good now. I'm excited for this season."

Wiggins made the remarks

while sitting on a stage with Anthony Bennett and Thaddeus Young — the two other players that came to Minnesota in the three-team blockbuster — and Timberwolves first-round draft pick Zach LaVine.

Truth be told, Wiggins has known for weeks that he was never going to play for the Cavs — becoming just the second No. 1 overall pick since the NBA-ABA merger in 1976 to be traded without ever playing a game for the team that drafted him. But a seldom-used rule in the collective bargaining agreement prevented the deal from being consummated for 30 days.

"I've been hearing all the talks for a while now," said Bennett, the No. 1 overall pick in 2013. "I'm just here to learn from everybody."

Reports leaked out long before the deadline that the deal was agreed upon and Wiggins had to make a couple of awkward promotional appearances where he bobbed and weaved around questions about his uncertain future. When it was made official, Wiggins had to hear about moving from a team that expected to contend for a title with the NBA's best player on board to a franchise that hasn't made the playoffs in 10 years. Nelson Cruz had two hits and drove in a run for the AL East-leading Orioles, who improved to 10-4 against Tampa Bay. Baltimore relievers gave up one hit over the final 4 1-3 innings.

MLB denies weekend protest by Tampa Bay Rays

Major League Baseball on Tuesday denied a protest filed by the Tampa Bay Rays last weekend in Toronto.

Executive Vice-President for Baseball Operations Joe Torre made the ruling, which stemmed from a play disputed by Rays' manager Joe Maddon in Saturday's 5-4 loss to the Blue Jays in 10 innings.

Wil Myers was called safe at first base on a pickoff throw by Toronto pitcher Mark Buehrle. After Buehrle returned to the rubber, Blue Jays' manager John Gibbons came out to challenge the call. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cavs. Love wants 'to win championships'

Kevin Love's phone rang in July and LeBron James asked the All-Star forward if he wanted to play with him in Cleveland.

"I'm in," Love told James. For the long haul.

Getting used to a new city and new team after being acquired by the Cavaliers on Saturday, Love said he's committed to winning an NBA title with the Cavaliers — however long it takes.

Love, who didn't make the playoffs during six sometimes rocky seasons with Minnesota, can opt out of his contract and become a free agent next summer.

But Love, 25, regarded as the game's top "spacing" forward, said he intends to stay with James and the Cavs.

"I'm committed to this team, committed long-term to the end goal and that's to win championships," he said.

Cleveland is smitten with its newest superstar.

Love was introduced Tuesday by the Cavs, who acquired him in a blockbuster, three-team trade that instantly turned Cleveland, which won just 33 games last season, into an NBA championship favourite. The deal also gives the team a star-powered trio in Love, James and Kyrie Irving.

And now that Love is gone, the Timberwolves are left to rebuild around No. 1 overall pick Andrew Wiggins and last year's top pick, Anthony Bennett, two young players they were able to pry from Cleveland. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Review. Nissan Altima mid-size sedan still offers a V6 option, but only on the top trim

drive@metronews.ca

Four-cylinder engines have vastly improved over the years and, in many cases, they've become so powerful that some models don't even offer V6 engines anymore. But there are buyers who still want that bigger engine, and one still offering it is the Nissan Altima.

Although the four-cylinder Altima comes in four trim lines, the V6 comes only in top-line SL trim, starting at $32,998.

This also gives you such creature comforts as dual-zone climate control, heated leather seats, a heated steering wheel, premium stereo and a rear-view monitor.

My tester was further optioned with a Technology Package for $1,100, which added navigation, lane-departure warning, blind-spot monitor, and moving-obstacle detection, which warns if pedestrians or vehicles are nearby when backing up.

The 3.5-litre engine makes 270 horsepower, and it's powerful and quiet. It's mated to a continuously variable transmission (CVT), an automatic that uses pulleys instead of gears for optimum fuel economy. These units can sometimes feel unusual, but the Altima is among the best I've driven, and it's often hard to detect that it isn't a regular transmission.

In combined driving, I averaged a decent 7.6 L/100 km, which was also well within the car's published range.

The ride is stable and smooth, but I did find the steering a bit jerky, especially on longer, sweeping curves. Test-drive it thoroughly, and at lower and higher speeds, to determine if it's right for you.

The interior is roomy and handsome, and I like that the controls are big and easy to use when driving.

Those in the rear seat will enjoy lots of legroom, but although the seats fold down for extra trunk space, you don't get a completely flat cargo floor.

The step up to the V6 is expensive: the top-line four-cylinder model is $28,898, and it's outfitted very similarly to its V6 sibling. So even if you believe that bigger is better, try them both before you buy.

tion, and around again.

Duke's prototype has five cylinders but only three sets of ports, spark plugs and injectors, yet produces the same amount of power strokes as a six-cylinder engine.

So compactness and light weight are the major hallmarks of this design. The whole thing can be packaged in a very tidy barrel-like housing, to make a very dense power unit. The way everything moves inside that barrel is quite elegant, too.

Duke's chief technology officer, Mike Fry, recently told the Society of Automotive Engineers that the engine "is on the cusp of commercialization" and that the firm is now looking for the right first application.

It's not likely that the first application will be in a vehicle. Its best first chance is probably something military, marine or aerospace.

But Duke said the engine would work well as an automotive range-extender engine. (Think of auxiliary gas engines in the Chevrolet Volt and Cadillac ELR).

It also feels like there is more willingness out there to challenge the status quo of the auto industry.

Maybe some upstart technology company, or some non-automotive company, will take the Duke circular engine and run with it, and give the internal combustion engine another interesting chapter.
